ISO Re-Certification

In the year 2003 Precision Cable Assemblies and Badger Wire received their re-certification to the ISO 9001:2000 standard. The transferring over of our quality management system renewed and deepened the company's commitment to customer satisfaction and continual improvement.

The ISO Executive Management committee identified areas of our company that are the main contributors to our success and have set up objectives in each to track our continual improvement toward our established goals. The new standard requires greater involvement from all levels within the organization in the achievement of these goals.

The company is looking forward to the positive results from the implementation of the new standard.
